Director of Personnel

Assistant to the Director

TV Interview

In an TV interview with Congressman Harold Ostertag, of upstate New York, which will be released to the press and theatre audiences this week-end, the following questions and answers occur re how to apply for a position with the CIA:

Mr. Ostertag: One last question: How do you get a job with the CIA?

Mr. Dulles: Well, you have to be pretty good to start with, because I don't want any second rate people. I'm always out for really first class people. All you have to do is come around to our office at 2430 E Street, here, or write a letter to our director of personnel, and you'll get an answer, and then someone will come and talk with you, and if you've got the qualifications, glad to have you.

Mr. Ostertag: Well, thank you, Allen. I'm afraid our time is about up. Friends, you have been listening to Allen W. Dulles, the director of our Central Intelligence Agency, who is responsible for intelligence work of our national government, throughout the world. This is your Congressman, Harold Ostertag, reporting to you from the nation's capital, and I want to remind you in closing that this is YOUR government.
